To Strawberry Growers

A meeting of the proposed strawberry growers of this section will meet at the courthouse at 2 p. m. next Tuesday, October 11, and every citizen interested in the project will be expected to be present.

It will be remembered that last spring when our neighboring counties were growing rich from marketing the berry crop while we in this county wondered where we would get the means to finance the making of a crop, we came together with much enthusiasm, organized an association, pledged to plant more than a hundred acres of berries at once, and had the very best of intentions. Then it was found from the advice of experts in berry line that we were too late to take the risk then, and that we should defer planting until next March. A committee was appointed to solicit funds to finance the project and another meeting was to be held when the money was raised to go ahead with. Right there we stopped last spring. But we had the advice to begin preparing for berry planting this fall, and it is for this purpose that the meeting will be next Tuesday.

There is money in berry growing and every section of Tennessee that has gone into the business and stayed in it is prosperous and felt but little hard times of last year and this. And if this county will get into the business in good hard earnest and stay in it year in and year out like they stay in the cotton raising game it will be one the richest counties in the state and its farmers and business men will laugh at panics, just as did the other berry growing sections of West Tennessee.

Just when we were worrying over financing the 1921 farm crop, Humboldt received for her berry crop a half million dollars. She got a little later almost as much more for her green peas, beans and tomatoes, and the hard times that prevailed in the cotton section never touched her. Other berry and vegetable sections fared just as well as did Humboldt. And it is our way to prosperity and an easier condition financially. Let us all meet Tuesday, farmers, business and professional men, we are all interested.

Register's Run-Off Election

In the Register's Run-Off Primary last Saturday Richard P. Ozier defeated C. M. Reames by a vote of 1512 to 558, according to returns from the districts as posted Saturday. The official returns from the several districts will be found below.

Few more hotly contested elections have been held in this county before. In the first primary there were six candidates, and Ozier and Reames received the two highest votes and went into the run-off last Saturday. Neither had been a candidate before the Democrats of the county before, but both had good backing among the old-timers in politics of the county. Ozier is a son-in-law of M. L. Farris, former Sheriff and who came within one vote of defeating the late Junius Hobson for Register eight years ago this fall. Reames is a brother of former Trustee S. B. Reamer, who served two terms in that office. These facts gave prestige to the respective candidates and every inch of ground in the race was hotly contested right up to the hour of voting.

The new nominee for Register is yet under 30, is a farmer of this district, made a crop this year and told The Falcon Monday that he would don his work clothes and gather his own crop between now and cold weather. He is a World-war veteran, and is counted one of the county's best young men. The big majority given him in this primary is a compliment he can very well feel proud of.

Following is the official vote by precincts as canvassed by the County Committee which met in the court house on Wednesday of this week.

Fairview Notes

An advertisement appearing in the last issue of The Falcon makes us feel sad. The adv. referred to announced that on a certain date two rural school houses will be sold to the highest bidder. It is not meant to attach any blame to the gentlemen who are converting these houses into cash for in all probability it is the best thing to do under the circumstances. But the sad part of the matter is that it indicates that our rural school system is being undermined. The bad condition of our roads for much of the time makes it impractical to run wagonettes and so considerable numbers of our children are left without school advantages. If the citizens of our rural communities had a proper appreciation of the value of the home school they should not suffer them to be depleted and finally abandoned. It has been thought by some that any kind of a teacher and any kind of equipment or none at all was good enough for the country school let wake up. Let us see the educational advantages furnished our children are not inferior to those in town. Then let us support that school. If teachers of doubtful ability or training must be employed, let them teach in the town schools where their work is under the direction and supervision of an able principal and let us put the strongest and best teachers in the rural schools where one teacher must teach and control so many grades. Then let us back up that teacher. Our rural schools are the hope of our country.

Our teacher has had the ninth grade parsing in grammar for several weeks. We have begun to grasp the meaning of parsing. At first we thought it was not doing us any good, but now we think that people cannot learn grammar properly if they do not practice parsing. Persons who do not learn to parse have lost one the essential parts of grammar.

The president of our class organization, Philip Bishop, has been on a trip to his grandparents at Middleton, but he has returned now. He has been greatly missed by members of the class organization.

Thanks

It is impossible for me to see my friends who gave me their support in my recent race for Register of Fayette county, and so I take this means of expressing to them my heartfelt thanks for their votes and support. It is particularly gratifying to me that I carried by a plurality vote the three districts in which I have lived at different times of my life. That my near neighbors have this confidence in me is a source of gratification to me always. I thank you.

Lincoln and Davis

(From the Toledo Blade)

On a memorial park laid out within the county of Todd, in Kentucky, the gray fragments of the Confederate army will rally on June 3, 1921, to see unveiled the 175-foot obelisk which is the last offering of the south to Jefferson Davis. On this site, 114 years ago, was born the Confederacy, for here was born the man who for 25 years before the Civil War and 25 years after it maintained implacably the doctrine of state rights, the principle of secession, the contention that the constitution is a voluntary compact of sovereign states. It is a mystery of fate which brought two Kentucky lads of similar age born 140 miles apart, to the forefront in the most romantic of all wars. It was a double mystery that one course of life should lead Lincoln forward as an apostle of nationalism and another course of life made Davis the champion of state rights. Yet from early manhood Lincoln always saw the Union above all, and from early manhood Davis cherished the state. He cherished it to the point of sacrifice. When his wounds and gallantry in the Mexican war brought him an appointment from President Polk as a brigadier general of volunteers, he refused, declaring that only a state could make an officer of state volunteers. Wounds and gallantry in the Mexican War! Who remembered that Davis shed his blood for the nation? Who remembers that he served in the Black Hawk War, that as secretary of war under Pierce he created a new artillery and a new infantry? These were national acts, and Davis desired no fame as a nationalist. He chose his own field of service for danger or renown—he was of the Confederacy before it was born and after it was dead and he would now rather be dear to a remnant of gray veterans than command the world's armies.

Died

On Thursday morning October 6, 1921, at 5 o'clock the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Rogers and claimed from them their little son, Murrell Rogers, age 11 years 6 months and 21 days. All that love and skill could do was done for the flower that bloomed to fade so early.

But death was inevitable. He was quietly laid at rest in Mt. Olive cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn.

Murrell was a patient little sufferer for just a short while, then fell asleep in the arms of Jesus.

Surely he was but a sunbeam sent from God to shine in the home a while on earth, then fade and deepen into the brighter light of heaven.

He leaves father, mother, two brothers and one sister. To mourn his loss be side other relatives and friends.

May God be with the bereaved ones in this hour of trial and help them feel that He doeth all things well. And heaven is far brighter and richer to you now.

Little Murrell was such a bright, noble, little boy that he was loved by all that knew him. Dear father and mother, we can sympathize with you and we rest assured that he went out from your arms into the arms of Jesus.

Sweet little Murrell! you are, we trust, with Christ in heaven to dwell through endless ages there. A FRIEND

Franklin Pierce Wiggins

Born in 1856, May 26, lived to manhood, married in 1910, died September 12, 1921, without ever removing from the place of his birth. Such is a brief history of Franklin Pierce Wiggins who passed to his reward at his home near Hewlett's store in the Eleventh district of Fayette county recently.

Frank (as he was known to his family and friends) Wiggins counted his friends by scores, for he was of that genial and cordial manner and disposition that won him for a friend every man with whom he came in contact. A cripple from early life, he bore affliction patiently, met every crisis with a smile and carried goodwill where ever he went. Few men have grown to manhood in Fayette county who held a more whole-souled friendship for those he esteemed his friends than did Frank Wiggins.

And in his home he was what husband and father should be, and the small son whom he leaves has in the life and good name of his father a fine heritage, an example worthy of emulation in a thousand ways. Tho his life brought him riches, there were other things he lived for and enjoyed, and these are to be cherished in the memory of his son.

Mr. Wiggins married Miss Lillie Herrendon, of Imboden, Arkansas, in 1910, and she, with one small son, survives him. There are surviving the following brothers and sisters: Wyle Wiggins of Macon, Will Wiggins, of Leland, Miss., Mrs. June Carter of Little Rock, Arkansas, and Mrs. J. H. Humphreys of Yum Yum.

Deceased was a member of the Methodist church for many years.

Shakespeare Club

The first regular meeting of the Shakespeare Club was held at the home of Mrs. N. M. Gibson on Wednesday, October 12. After a short business meeting the club devoted an hour and a half to the study of the first act of "Macbeth". During the last fifteen minutes of the meeting an interesting discussion was held on current topics. Such subjects were presented as the Panama Tolls Exemption, Certain phases of the Japanese question and the coming Disarmament Conference. At the close of this discussion the club adjourned to meet again with Mrs. Gibson Wednesday October 26.

Thanks

Words can not tell how much appreciation I feel to the Democrats of Fayette county who honored me with their votes in the two primary elections we have just gone thru in this county, and in which I was given the nomination for Register. I thank every voter who supported me and feel grateful for the honor conferred upon me.

An Agreeable Surprise

"About three years ago when I was suffering from a severe cold on my lungs and coughed most of the time night and day, I tried a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was surprised at the promptness with which it gave me relief," writes Mrs. James Brown, Clark Mills, N. Y. Many another has been surprised and pleased with the prompt relief afforded by this remedy.
